“Messrs. Cassell’s ‘National Library’ seems to be in every respect most admirable and worthy of encouragement.”—THE TIMES.

In WEEKLY VOLUMES, price 3d.; in Cloth, 6d.

Cassell’s National Library.

Edited by HENRY MORLEY, LL.D.,

Professor of English Literature at University College, London.

“Cassell’s National Library is a wonderful bargain.”—Athenæum.

“The several opposition libraries, the issue of which Messrs. Cassell’s spirited enterprise has provoked, are not in the running with Cassell’s National Library.”—Detroit Free Press.

In referring to Cassell’s National Library, Punch says:—“The old proverb was ‘Every Englishman’s house is his castle;’ in future this will be ‘Every Englishman’s house has his Cassell.’”

“No longer does the excuse exist that the price of good literature is prohibitive. The same quantity of matter for which the Frenchman pays three francs may be obtained in England for three pence, and, what is more, the English matter is infinitely superior to the French. To see such names as Burke, Sheridan, Byron, Martin Luther, Isaac Walton, Macaulay, Henry Mackenzie, Latimer, Goldsmith, Plutarch, Scott, Dean Swift, Shakespeare, Bacon, Herodotus, and Mrs. Inchbald, follow each other in rapid succession is a fact that, of itself, proclaims the extreme excellence of Cassell’s National Library. May England know how to encourage these purest and best gems of cheap English literature, and may France not tarry long before she learns a lesson from her neighbour across the Channel.”—The French Correspondent of the Nottingham Daily Express.

[ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.]

P R E F A C E.

IN first introducing to the public the "Unicode," by means of "The Universal Telegraphic Phrase-Book,"* it is well to give a few preliminary explanations and directions.

All the great submarine Telegraph Companies, and almost all foreign countries and colonies, have adopted the word-tariff, or system of charging a certain sum for each word, and Great Britain has practically done so. by the changes effected during the last Parliament. Every person who has heretofore sent telegraphic messages abroad has learned by experience the economy of condensation, and the advantage of the use of a Code known to both sender and receiver. By this means the substance of a message embracing a dozen ordinary words may be conveyed in a single code-word, with a fulness and clearness not to be otherwise attained unless at a prohibitive cost. The same effect is discovered in inland telegraphic communication under the new arrangements. The sixpenny telegram is found, except under special circumstances, to be a misnomer, the unavoidable length of the addresses (where the expense of registering a cypher has not been incurred by the Receiver), and the name of the Sender and Receiver absorbing so many of the twelve words as frequently to leave only two or three available for the text of the telegram. Attention is therefore naturally turned to condensation, and, as a necessary consequence, to coding.

The Code-Book hitherto has been distinguished by two features—a high price and an attempted exclusiveness. The "Unicode" aims at precisely opposite qualities, viz., a low price and a universality of employment, so that not only in all offices, but in clubs, hotels, and private residences copies shall be found and freely used.

* A Pocket Edition of this book, of convenient size, is also published, price 2s. 6d.

An example will best demonstrate the mode of using, and the economy effected. Say the following is the message in full :—

TO Smith, 100, Prince Rupert Road, Shepherd's Bush.
Jones evening	dines and	with remains	us the	this night Smith

Here the address and signature take eight words, and the body of the message ten, making eighteen words in all, or six extra to pay for; whereas by using the "Unicode" the message is reduced to ten words, and runs thus :—

TO Smith, 100, Prince Rupert Road, Shepherd's Bush.
Jones	Coctivus	Smith

But in foreign telegrams the difference is more striking. The rate, for instance, from South America is ten shillings per word, and the following message (without reckoning the address) would cost £3 :—"Order executed before your telegram arrived ;" whereas the "Unicode" word "Obumbro" would convey the same message at a cost of ten shillings, or a saving of £2 10s.

Many phrases which at first sight would appear too unnecessarily minute, notably in domestic affairs, are purposely inserted as being those which experience shows are in actual daily use, notwithstanding their heavy cost for transmission.

Users of existing codes have constantly experienced difficulty and misunderstanding from the fact that, English words being used for the cyphers, the messages have at times read intelligibly in the ordinary and not the code meaning of the words, and the Receiver has not known which to adopt. This has been entirely obviated in the "Unicode" by exclusively employing for the cyphers Latin words which strictly conform to the regulations of the International Telegraph Conferences held at Paris, London, and Berlin. An equally important point has also been carefully borne in mind. It is generally known that the telegraphic alphabet is composed of three elements: the dot, the dash, and the space. These symbols may with great facility be transposed in transmission, causing words, however dissimilar in ordinary language (such as fancy and pantry) to be confounded one with another in the process of telegraphy. This compilation, however, has been made under the personal supervision of telegraphic experts of long experience, and it is claimed for it that the cypher words are from their telegraphic construction the least liable to erroneous transmission by the operators.

The cypher words have been arranged alphabetically, and the phrases are likewise so arranged, having regard to what is in each the principal or key-word.

Not the least valuable feature (and it is a novel one) in the present volume is the addition of a list of important firms and establishments in Great Britain, with their registered telegraphic addresses, who will receive telegrams in the "Unicode." This list will be hereafter increased, and for this purpose intimations are invited from those firms at home and abroad who desire their names to be added. These should be sent to the care of the Publishers, and addressed to the Editors of the "Unicode," who will be grateful for any suggestions for improvements and additions.

To allow for the composition of a small private code available only to the individual compilers, and not to be adopted hereafter in the "Unicode" for specific phrases for public use, a few pages with cypher words only have been added, to which phrases may be attached as desired.

NOTE TO SECOND EDITION.

The compilers refer to the following communication which they have received :—

“ I have examined from the point of view of a telegraph operator of long standing, several Codes which have been recently published, and I emphatically pronounce the UNICODE to be the only one I have seen where the hand of the expert can be discovered. In one of the other compilations it is claimed as a merit that none of the cypher words exceed five letters. This, however, is a serious blot, and condemns the book in my judgment. In two Codes I observe a free use of manufactured words, and yet, for extra-European correspondence, such words can be and are generally rejected by the Cable Companies. Naturally it is preferable that the operator should transmit messages where the meaning is clear and the words as usual, but as it seems evident that the use of Codes will grow day by day it is to be hoped that the public will continue to employ one so workman-like and systematic as the UNICODE.”

REGULATIONS AS TO TRANSMISSION OF TELEGRAMS.

THE rules and regulations which govern the telegraphic communication between various portions of the world are laid down by the International Telegraph Conferences which meet periodically in one or other of the capitals of Europe, and the following gives the effect of those which should be most widely known :—

All telegrams should be legibly written.

Telegrams may be composed of plain language, of code language, or of secret language.

Telegrams in plain language must present a clear meaning in any one of the languages admitted for telegraphic correspondence.

Telegrams in code language must consist of words not exceeding ten letters in length, each of them presenting a clear meaning, but not necessarily any consecutive sense, and belonging to any one or to all of the following languages, but to no other, viz. :—English, French, German, Italian, Dutch, Portuguese, Spanish, and Latin.

Code words containing more than ten letters are charged at cypher rate.

Proper names are not admitted in the text of code messages unless used in their natural sense.

The Company can demand the production of the codes and vocabularies, for the purpose of controlling the execution of the preceding regulations.

Private telegrams composed of secret letters such as a b x y z, are not admitted in extra-European correspondence.

Illegitimate combinations of words contrary to the usage of the language, and abbreviated and wrongly spelt words, are inadmissible.

The maximum length of a single word is fixed at 15 letters in European telegrams, and at 10 letters in extra-European telegrams, any additional letters being counted and charged for as extra words at the rate of 15 or 10 letters respectively to the word.

Any instruction the sender may have to give as to the delivery at destination, prepayment of reply, acknowledgment of receipt, to its being a collated telegram, &c., should be written immediately before the address. These indications may be given in the following abbreviated forms, when they will be counted as one word only :—

RP for Reply paid.
TC ,, Collation paid.
CR ,, Acknowledgment of receipt.
PP ,, Postage paid.
XP ,, Express paid.

FS for To follow.
RPD ,, Urgent reply paid.
PR ,, Post registered.
EP ,, Estaffette paid.

Any sender may request by writing the instruction : “Télégramme à faire suivre” (i.e. to follow) or “(FS)” (which is charged for), immediately before the address, that the terminal office shall cause his telegram to follow the receiver within the limits of Europe.

The charge to the first address only is prepaid, the cost of further transmission being collected on delivery.

PRIVATE CODE.

A SIMPLE means of converting the Unicode into a secret private code is for correspondents to arrange to use instead of the cypher set opposite to the phrases in the book the cypher affixed to the phrase one, two, or more lines above or below, as may be selected. For instance, if it is agreed to use instead of the regulation cypher word the one next following it in the Code, a telegram with the word "Oporice" would mean to the general body of Unicode users "Posted letter to-day, do not leave before receipt;" but the person for whose private information the message was intended would read the real meaning as "Posted letter to-day, do not act on it, another follows."

The following selection of cypher words will never be included in the "Unicode" for permanent use with any specific phrases. They are intended to be used only for private phrases to be arranged specially between individual correspondents :—

The Metropolitan Year-Book.

A Guide to Imperial, Municipal, Local, Commercial, Ecclesiastical, Educational, Benevolent, and Social London. With Coloured Map.

Price 2s.; or in Cloth, 2s. 6d.

THE object of this work is to bring together within the compass of one handy volume information which, although constantly needed in one or other of its features by those who live in the metropolis, has been heretofore obtainable only by consulting a multiplicity of works, some of them bulky and expensive, others little known and difficult of access.

Its preparation was suggested to the publishers by the recent reconstruction of the local government of London, and special attention has accordingly been given to this aspect of the metropolis, the area covered by the work being, broadly, that of the NEW COUNTY COUNCIL, although, to secure completeness, that area has in particular cases been exceeded.

A list will be given of the members of this new body, together with a brief and clear account of its functions and authority, and of the qualifications both for members and for voters, &c.; the Corporation of the City is similarly treated; as also are the Vestries, the Boards of Guardians, the School Board, the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, the River Conservators, and the other local authorities. In each case the list of officials, members, &c., is preceded by a paragraph from a competent pen, setting forth, in language free from technicality, the powers and constitution of the authority and its relation to other authorities; and in this way it is hoped that the local government of London, in spite of its embarrassing complexity, will be made easily intelligible to the constantly-increasing number of those who are interested in it.

At the same time the METROPOLITAN YEAR-BOOK is not intended to be merely, or even principally, a handbook to the metropolis regarded municipally, the same careful and elaborate attention having been given to its various other aspects. In the first place, the work deals with IMPERIAL LONDON—with London as the capital of the Empire—and gives a considerable mass of information under such heads as The Royal Family, the Royal Households, Foreign Embassies, the Ministry, Parliament, Government Offices, Courts and Law Offices, the Army, Navy, and Reserve Forces, &c.

Next comes the MUNICIPAL SECTION, of which we have already spoken; then the COMMERCIAL, with particulars as to Chambers of Commerce and Agriculture, Trade Protection Associations, the Stock Exchange, the City and all other Public Companies, Building Societies, Markets, Steamboats and Steam Packets, Wharves, Carriers, and Coaches, Cab Regulations and Fares, Newspapers and Periodicals, &c.

A fourth section forms a Directory to ECCLESIASTICAL, EDUCATIONAL, and BENEVOLENT London, comprising a list of places of worship of all denominations, with hours of service, the names and addresses of all clergymen and ministers in the metropolis, a list of the Colleges, Public and Grammar Schools, and Institutes, and another of Hospitals and Public Dispensaries, followed by others of Societies and Institutions, Public and Circulating Libraries, &c.

The closing section regards the metropolis as the great SOCIAL centre of the country. In it will be found a comprehensive classified list of Clubs, including not merely Social, but Cricket, Football, Cycle, and other such Clubs, and another of Exhibitions, Museums, and Picture Galleries. Theatres, Music, and other Public Halls, have not been overlooked, nor have the Public Parks and Gardens. Space has been made for meets of hounds and race-meetings; while among the other subjects included are Choral Societies, Freemasons' Lodges, Friendly Societies, and Suburban Resorts. This section will meet the wants of those who come to London to see its sights, as well as of those who are actually resident in the metropolis.

Summary as is this sketch of the contents of the METROPOLITAN YEAR-BOOK, enough has been said to show that not merely to those who are alive to their duties in connection with the local government of the City, but also to public officials and those who have to deal with them, to men of business, to those who move in the religious, scholastic, and charitable spheres, to those, again, for whom life is pleasure, as well as work and duty, to all, in fact, who live in the metropolis or have relations with it, the work is calculated to be of eminent service.

"The great enterprise of Messrs. Cassell deserves to enjoy a full measure of public favour, as the general design is judicious, the arrangement systematic, and the execution of the work extremely creditable to the editor and all others concerned. The peculiar excellences of the dictionaries of Webster, Ogilvie, and Richardson are each and all surpassed. . . . The illustrations are executed with clearness and precision, many of them possessing much artistic merit. . . . It is not our custom to refer to the price of books, but in this case the cheapness of such an excellent publication is one of the most notable points about it."—Athenæum.
